About the Series

A found collection of unmailed, handwritten letters from 1922. Join us as we read them aloud for the first time in over a century.

Within their pages lie accounts of horror, the supernatural, mystery, and the bizarre. Some letters piece together an unsettling puzzle that unfolds across the series. Others stand alone, offering eerie glimpses into the strange and terrifying events that plagued the quarantine island.

Long Description

The Lazaretto Letters is a historical horror podcast centered on a found collection of unmailed letters from 1922. Each letter reveals strange phenomena and personal reckonings from those quarantined on a remote island. Through dramatic voice acting, immersive sound design, and haunting atmosphere, listeners are drawn into a descent into madness, isolation, and the supernatural.

What begins as the writings of a young man in quarantine soon expands into a web of eerie confessions, mysterious nurses, séances, and spiritual unrest. Each week, new letters are read aloud for the first time in over a century — revealing the truth of what befell those trapped on the island they called the Lazaretto.

Inspired by early 20th-century spiritualism and real historical quarantine islands, the series merges literary horror and psychological suspense, evoking the tone of The Magnus Archives, The Black Tapes, and Archive 81.
